Report

Report: Certificate GTM Message Test Study (May 2025)

Background

There is a three phase launch approach for MasterClass Certificates:

1. Phase 1: Announcement of MC Certificates as a new product. Messaging focuses on vision, partners, and breadth of topics, and points of differentiation to drive pre-enrollment.

2. Phase 2: Shift focus of messaging to Anthropic course to drive pre-enrollment. Leans more into the value pillar, anchored in Anthropic course and AI messaging to drive early revenue

3. Phase 3: focuses on Anthropic course to drive sales

Research Objective

This research focuses primarily on Phase 1 and touches on Phase 2 of GTM strategy and messaging. Test message elements against principles outlined in MasterClass Certificates 2025 Strategy

Key Questions

1. Product lines: Which product line appeals the most / least to our target consumer and why? How well do the product lines communicate: what the program is, the value it provides, and what sets it apart from other online certificate programs?

2. Campaign Lines: How motivating are the campaign lines and how might they be improved to resonate better? How well do they communicate the core benefit of "real, demonstrated career advancement"?

3. Capstone name: What is the preferred capstone title and why?

4. Positioning and Value Pillars: What parts resonate the most or don't resonate and how can they be improved? How well do positioning and pillars convey…

   MasterClass Certificates Strategy Principles:
   a. Direct ROI / actionable learning — immediately benefit my career growth
   b. Work-ready deliverables — leads to projects that demonstrate to employers or clients as proof of my skills)
   c. Expert-driven storytelling — provides top-tier expert insights with narrative-driven content
   d. Evergreen — includes trends and future-focused course content

5. Differentiation: How do we stand out compared to competitors on positioning & value pillars?

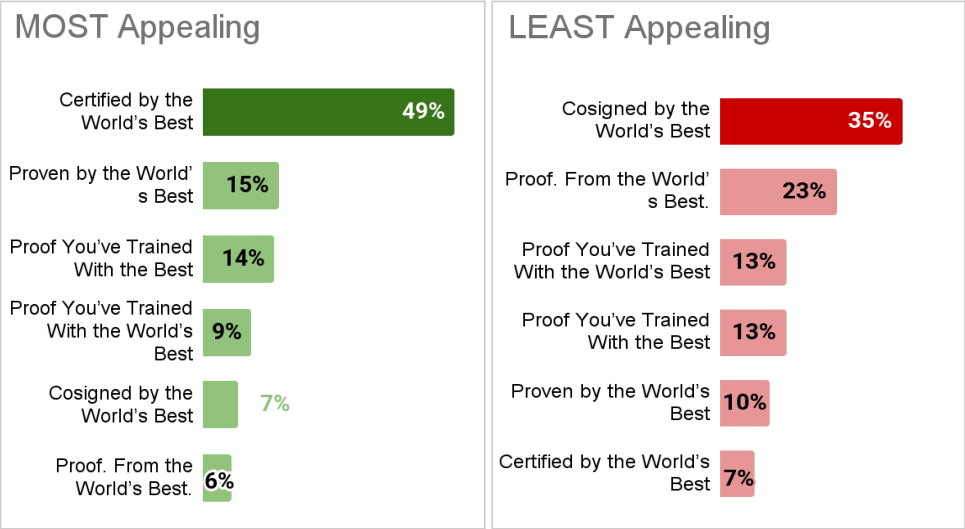
Which product line appeals the most / least to our target consumer?



Q19/20. Please select the message that would MOST/LEAST appeal to you. Select one. N=235

Why is "Certified by the Best" the MOST appealing product line?

Themes derived from open-end feedback. See all responses here.

- The word “certified” resonates and signals expertise and quality
    - “certified” tells me it’s going to be by someone who knows what they are talking about
    - “It says certified, which is important to making it feel legit”
    - “Certified just adds some legitimacy to the sentence.”
- It sounds more legitimate and official than the other options.
    - This makes it feel more legitimate to me.
- It is simple, clear, and concise
    - “Its simple and easy to understand”
    - “Easy to understand and straight to the point.”
    - “It's quick and concise and clear and very easy to understand.”

Why is “Cosigned by the World’s Best” the LEAST appealing product line?

Themes derived from open-end feedback. See all responses here.

- “Cosign” does not convey the sense of a legitimate or significant endorsement.
    - "It just sounds as if it’s not a legit backing"
    - "Co-signed has no professional meaning"
    - "Sounds like it is projecting that it is not any type of accredited"
- Suggestion of minimal or passive Involvement
    - "I want to know the world’s best is making more of an impact than co-signing."
    - "Ssounds like the least involved. Like the trainers have very little to do with anything"
    - "Signals that the world's best wasn't completely involved."
- Vagueness in general and lack of clarity around word “co-sign”
    - "The word cosign is just confusing in this context"
    - "The word co-signed - not sure what it exactly means for this situation."
    - “Vague and directionless. I’m not informed and would search elsewhere for the info.”
